Report on the Seminar on “Civil Service Preparation and Career Opportunities”

Gauripur, the 15th of October, 2025

A seminar focused on civil service preparation and career opportunities was recently organised by the IQAC and Career Guidance and Counselling Cell, Pramathesh Barua College, Gauripur, in collaboration with SPM IAS Academy, Guwahati. This important event took place in the college's Digital Classroom and was attended by an enthusiastic group of participants, including the principal, faculty members, and a diverse range of students eager to explore their future career paths.

The program commenced with a heartfelt welcome address by Mr. Dulal Karmakar, the Coordinator of the Internal Quality Assurance Cell (IQAC) at Pramathesh Barua College. Mr. Karmakar emphasised the critical role that civil servants play in shaping and transforming the landscape of a country. His remarks set an encouraging tone for the proceedings.

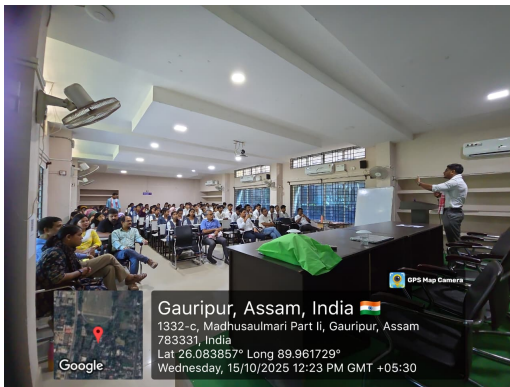

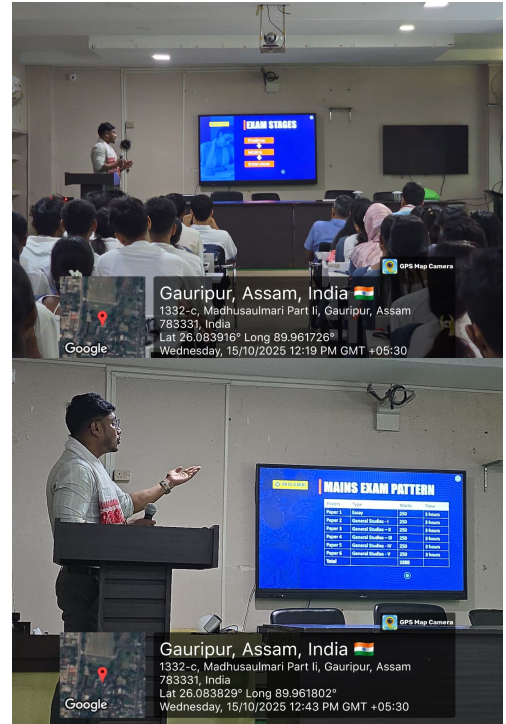

Following this, a traditional felicitation ceremony was conducted under the guidance of Miss Bishakha Chetia, the Convenor of the Career Guidance and Counselling Cell. The ceremony was supported by Assistant Professors Mrs. Pinky Gogoi and Miss Jyotsna Devi, who participated in honouring the guest speakers and acknowledging their contributions.

The session gained momentum as Mr. Gitartha Bhuyan, BDM, SPM Group, took the stage to address the assembled students. He underscored the necessity of starting career preparation at a young age, particularly in light of the increasingly competitive job market. Notably, he highlighted issues surrounding financial constraints and urged female students to prioritise their career ambitions over traditional expectations regarding marriage. His forthright and empowering message resonated deeply with the audience, setting an inspiring

Next, Mr. Anupam Das, Senior Faculty member from SPM IAS Academy, shed light on the significance of pursuing a career in the civil service. He articulated the respect and prestige associated with such roles, along with the essential qualifications required. Delving into the intricacies of the Assam Public Service Commission (APSC) examination, Mr. Das detailed the stages of the exam process and its rigorous pattern. He stressed that discipline and consistency are vital for success in this challenging examination. Moreover, he illuminated the resources offered by SPM IAS Academy to help students excel in their preparations. This includes a YouTube channel and a mobile application that provide daily and weekly news analyses of important events and newly launched schemes from the State Government, tailored specifically for aspirants.

Following the presentations, an interactive session allowed students to engage directly with Mr. Das. He addressed their queries regarding the academy's offerings, including online classes, recorded lectures, scholarships, subsidies, and the provision of essential study materials for deserving students. This open exchange encouraged students to seek further clarity on how best to navigate their civil service aspirations.

The seminar concluded with a vote of thanks delivered by Miss Chetia, who expressed her gratitude to all participants for their active involvement and contribution to the event's success. She conveyed her hope that the seminar would serve as a meaningful impetus for students to thoughtfully consider their future career paths. Miss Chetia concluded with an aspirational vision that Pramathesh Barua College would one day boast civil servants among its alumni, who would serve the nation with wisdom and integrity.
